

Law Society of Saskatchewan Continuing Professional Development

MBA Concepts for Lawyers

MBA Concepts for Lawyers provides a one-day crash course in understanding the legal impact of business operations on your individual and corporate clients, providing important insights into their health, value and future stability. The principles are constant and apply to all types and sizes of businesses.

Program Highlights include practical techniques to help you spot vital financial and legal issues including methods for reading a balance sheet, income statement and statement of cash flows. A discussion of the risk and return model, how stocks and bonds are priced, and the effective and ethical use of financial leverage, including the accompanying legal doctrines in the areas of mergers and acquisitions and securities. Significant financial reform legislation will be discussed, including disclosure, corporate governance and executive compensation requirements and changes to exemption registration requirements. Two ethical case studies will be presented in the context of financial accounting, discussing whether the lawyers involved potentially violated the rules of professional responsibility.

This internationally acclaimed program has been presented to and received excellent reviews from the Continuing Legal Education Society of British Columbia, the Toronto law firm McMillan LLP, Business Academy, as well as the Ontario Bar Association. This seminar will refine and expand your knowledge of financial matters giving you, your firm and your clients a real competitive edge. Don't miss this extraordinary opportunity!

Edward S. Adams is the Howard E. Buhse professor of finance and law, Co-Director of the Kommerstad Centre for Business Law and Entrepreneurship, and Director of Continuing Legal Education Programs at the University of Minnesota Law School where he specializes in corporate law, corporate finance, secured transactions, commercial paper and bankruptcy.

Professor Adams graduated cum laude from the University of Chicago Law School and obtained a Masters of Business Administration from the Carlson School of Management at the University of Minnesota. He has authored 15 books and more than 30 articles of business-related issues.
