Unrepresented Litigants and Insurance Claims

Self-represented litigants (SRLs) have been appearing before the courts and other parts of the justice system in growing numbers, resulting in increased challenges for the courts, lawyers, and other practitioners.

Handling insurance claims and litigation can be a challenge and even more so when dealing with unrepresented litigants. Jane Wootten of SGI and Nicholas Cann of McKercher will be presenting to practitioners on navigating the legal, ethical, and practical issues that can and do arise when dealing with non-lawyers in an insurance litigation and claim context.

This session has been conveniently scheduled from noon to 2pm to ensure minimum disruption to your daily practice; lunch will be provided and can be collected starting at noon and eaten during the presentation which will start promptly at 12:30pm.
