New Options for Legal Assistance in Saskatchewan

There will now be a new way to get legal help in Saskatchewan because of an initiative by the Ministry of Justice and Law Society of Saskatchewan to expand access to legal services in underserved areas and provide the public with more options. Recent changes to the law have created a new category of legal professional in Saskatchewan, alongside lawyers, called limited licensees.

Limited licensees are not lawyers but are authorized to provide specific legal services based on their education, training, and experience. Depending on their licence, limited licensees can provide advice and negotiate with respect to legal rights and responsibilities, draft or complete legal documents, or represent an entity or person at an administrative tribunal or Provincial Court.

The overall goal of limited licensing is to enhance access to legal services for underserved Saskatchewan individuals, balanced with ensuring public protection. These legislative changes mean an increase in access to regulated legal service providers, recognizing different types of expertise and qualifications.

Read more about this new category of licensed legal professional. The first limited licensees will start offering legal services from January 1, 2026. Members of the public can locate a licensed legal professional by searching the Law Society of Saskatchewan's Find Legal Assistance directory.

Accessing Legal Information in Saskatchewan Infographic

In support of 2025 Access to Justice Week, SALI has created an Accessing Legal Information Infographic highlighting how people in Saskatchewan access and obtain legal information:

Accessing Legal Information in Saskatchewan 2025

People rely on access to legal information to access justice.

Legal information is general information about the law. Legal information can help people learn about the law, their legal problems, ways of resolving legal problems, and legal rights and responsibilities.

Ways of Accessing Legal Information

Webinar Alert: Enhancing Legal Access for Underserved Newcomers

Attend this webinar on October 22, 2025 (10:00 am - 11:00 am CST), to learn about creative strategies that promote equal access to legal information and support and the urgent need to address systemic barriers faced by newcomers: Registration.

In Case You Missed It: SALI has created a new guide to help support the informed use of generative artificial intelligence (GenAI) tools: Using GenAI Tools to Obtain Legal Information. Legal Information providers can help the public by explaining how GenAI tools work, outlining the risks, and guiding them toward credible sources.

Updated Saskatchewan Family Law Handbook

The Public Legal Education Association of Saskatchewan (PLEA) is Saskatchewan's official source of legal education information, offering free information to the public.

PLEA has recently published an updated edition of its Family Law Handbook:

The book provides a plain language overview of family law that is helpful for anyone experiencing family law issues:

- Agreements
- Courts
- Parenting
- Support
- Property
- Separation and Divorce
- Violence

You and your organization can order free copies, as well as any other PLEA resource, directly from PLEA's website.
